LEADERSHIP STARTS FROM WITHIN

In a complex and turbulent environment, traditional business knowledge is no longer enough. Leaders require intuition and emotional intelligence, strong communication skills, and sound values and judgement.

At UQ Business School we help develop core capabilities like these to create effective and responsible leaders who are able to adapt to changing circumstances and who understand the impact of their business on society as a whole.

The Leadership specialisation is taught by lecturers who are internationally recognised experts in their field. You will learn ways to:
- Gain insight into your own unique personality traits
- Enhance your strengths and overcome limitations
- Use your leadership skills to transform your workplace
- Help to solve global problems such as climate change, poverty and inequality

The Leadership specialisation is part of the Master of Business program and incorporates the very latest research findings. In addition to the three new compulsory courses – Leadership: Theory & Practice, Wise Leadership and Leadership in Practice – you can choose a further two courses including Ethical Issues in Management, Communication and Organisation, and Corporate Sustainability.

All courses contain a practical element and culminate in an individually designed project in the final Leadership in Practice course.

‘The knowledge and skills I have learnt in this course have positively impacted and will continue to impact my working life.’ Leadership: Theory & Practice Student (2016)
